

STUDIO DANIEL LIBESKIND LEAD ARCHITECT: CRYSTALS RETAIL AND ENTERTAINMENT DISTRICT FACT SHEET

“CityCenter is a 21st century experience and a celebration of public urban life with retail, entertainment and the feel of an urban neighborhood. Crystals transforms the conventions of shopping and dining with a landscape of sophisticated and contemporary spaces enlivening The Strip and making CityCenter an international destination.”

– Daniel Libeskind, Founder, Studio Daniel Libeskind

Headquarters

- New York, New York

Founded

- 1990 in Berlin, Germany

Principal

- Daniel Libeskind

Overview

- Architect Daniel Libeskind became a household name in 2003 when he won the World Trade Center competition and was named master plan architect for the site. But it was winning the design competition for the Jewish Museum in Berlin in 1990 that launched him from a solo artist to a 100-person firm.
- An internationally renowned firm, Studio Daniel Libeskind (SDL) has won several other commissions for major museum projects, public and private cultural projects and large-scale commercial projects around the world.
- Libeskind’s architecture reflects his profound interest and involvement in philosophy, art, music, literature, theatre and film, and a continuing commitment to realizing handcrafted singular buildings.

Recognition

- Libeskind has received more than 15 academic and design awards, including an appointment in 2004 as the first cultural ambassador for architecture by the U.S. Department of State CultureConnect Program.

Experiencing Art and Entertainment

- Las Vegas has long been considered a premier shopping destination, and SDL* is upping the ante with Crystals, CityCenter’s 500,000-square-foot retail and entertainment district. The shopping mecca delivers exclusive offerings from the world’s most celebrated brands. SDL’s design creates a contemporary, lively environment, combining art and design with an unrivaled experience.

###

For More Information

Jenn Michaels, MGM Resorts International
702-650-7565, jenn_michaels@mgmresorts.com

* Consultant to AAI Architects, Inc.